Men Show True Colors After Marriage.

Are the relations between men all stages of life some men treat the same women like angels or beasts, depending only on the closeness of their relationship. Some young men will tell beautiful stories to young women, flatter them, promise the best things in the world, conceal their true selves, hide the truth and take them out to nice places-all this for the "one woman," fore they are married. But af ter marriage they generally show their true colors. Men will stop profane argaments or bloody lights, enact heroic deeds, neglect their daties, scorn danger, for the sake of a woman. But the divorce and domestic relations courts show these same men in a different light.

Some men worship women. At the same time they will not per mit these same women to be their equals, or even the equals of dirty crooks or drunken tramps at the ballot box.

The fault of women in this respect is that some of them ex pect, and some even demand unequal treatment, "Ladies first" or "I am a lady" stands with them far above 'l am an equal with man." If these women meet a man who treats them as equals, who acts natural and true, he has a good chance to land in some insane asylum. Is this kind of relationship natural?

If we accept the theory of Darwin that all living beings come from a common source we must admit that nature acts upon all living beings in the same degree. But when we study the animal kingdom we cannot find any unequal relations between the sex-

Perhaps mankind has not yet evolved far enough to recognize equality of the sexes. - By J Kernes, Chica, o.
